Portfolio Commentary

Performance Summary

The Growth Equities Portfolio returned 2.8% for the month and 14.7% for the quarter. Compared to the All Ordinaries Accumulation Index 1.4% for the month and 9.5% for the quarter.

Since inception, the portfolio has returned 376% after fees compared to the benchmark 243%.

Market Overview

The Australian economy remains in reasonable shape. The RBA considered a 50bp rate cut at its last meeting - a signal that there is more policy support to come. Quarterly GDP Growth came in at 0.2%, monthly CPI has eased to 2.1% year on year, unemployment is steady, and discretionary spending is softer. We're in an okay spot, with monetary policy likely to stay accommodative.

In the US, the One Big Beautiful Bill moved closer to law. It locks in a near term strategy of running the USA economy hot via deficit spending while pressuring the Fed to keep rates lower than they arguably should be. Globally, most central banks are shifting toward easing as inflation moderates.

The media briefly tried to stir panic around the US/Iran/Israel conflict. After US airstrikes on Iran, the AFR ran a weekend headline calling for a 10% drop - of course, that didn't happen.

Equity investors have now weathered three sharp market dislocations in five years: COVID in 2020, inflation in 2022, and tariffs in 2025. Each proved to be a great buying opportunity. From the April low, the Growth portfolio is up 24%, versus 14% for the All Ords Accum.

We expect global policy to be clearer by year end, once the full impact of tariffs across sectors is better understood.

Key Movements

Life360 (360) shares eased in June as investors locked in gains after the stock touched record highs in late May. Nonetheless, the company was one of the portfolio's standout performers in FY25, advancing 97%. Rapid subscriber growth, faster advertising monetisation, widening margins and a stronger balance sheet underpinned confidence in the platform's flywheel. We expect advertising to become a more material revenue stream in FY26 and see international markets adding meaningful momentum. After a strong run we trimmed the holding, yet the valuation still offers compelling upside.

Xero (XRO) has agreed to acquire Melio, a US-based payables platform serving small businesses, funding the A$3.9 billion purchase with a A$1.85 billion equity raising. The deal advances Xero's "3 × 3" framework by deepening its presence in its three priority markets, US, UK and Australia, and rounding out its core suite of accounting, payroll and payables products. Strategically the acquisition closes a critical product gap and broadens Xero's US customer reach; however, the consideration is rich and integration is likely to weigh on near-term earnings. We therefore declined to participate in the raising, though XRO remains a core holding.

Commodities were generally weaker in June (ASX 200 Resources Index –2%) which negatively impacted our BHP and South32 (S32) positions. Looking ahead, a trio of supportive macro themes is emerging: governments in the United States, Europe and Asia are pivoting toward growth-oriented fiscal programmes; major central banks have adopted a distinctly dovish tone, signalling lower funding costs and a friendlier backdrop for real assets; and early signs of détente in several geopolitical flashpoints have begun to ease supply-chain frictions and restore trade visibility. Together these dynamics leave high-quality, low-cost producers such as BHP and South32 well placed to recapture recent losses.

Significant Entries

We initiated a position in copper developer Firefly Metals (FFM) this month. The company hosts a high-grade copper-gold deposit in Newfoundland, Canada, a fast-growing mining province, and is steered by a management team with a strong record of unlocking shareholder value. A steady flow of catalysts lies ahead, from exploration drilling and resource upgrades to upcoming mining studies. Our DCF analysis points to significant upside from current levels.

Outlook

The policy backdrop is improving. Markets price an 85 % chance the RBA will trim the cash rate by 25 bp at the early July meeting, giving extra support to an economy with low inflation and low unemployment but softer consumer demand.

In the United States, futures still look for at least two Fed cuts before December, and other major central banks are on the same easing path. Together with the One Big Beautiful Bill's deficit fuelled stimulus, this synchronised shift reinforces the run it hot stance in the US.

We remain constructive on FY26. Earnings expectations have reset, and we see room for upgrades in technology, industrials and other quality growth names.

The fiscal impulse is alive in Washington and Canberra, valuations across our portfolio are reasonable, and tariff uncertainty should be resolved by the end of year.

Holding 8% cash, we are ready to deploy into quality growers with pricing power, capital light compounders and mis-priced cyclicals whenever volatility offers an opening. We await August reporting season which often provides attractive entry points.
